

THE STAR'S DAILY PICTORIAL PAGE

THE EVENING STAR, WASHINGTON, D. C., FRIDAY, OCTOBER 13, 1922.

Sir Charles Wakefield, former Lord Mayor of London, delivering address at unveiling of the Edmund Burke statue in Washington yesterday.

The Edmund Burke statue photographed directly after the unveiling, showing the flags of Great Britain and the United States, with which the work was draped.

At the unveiling of the Edmund Burke statue in Washington yesterday. Left to right: Sir Charles Wakefield, Miss Freda Wakefield, who unveiled the statue; Secretary of War Weeks and Alton B. Parker.

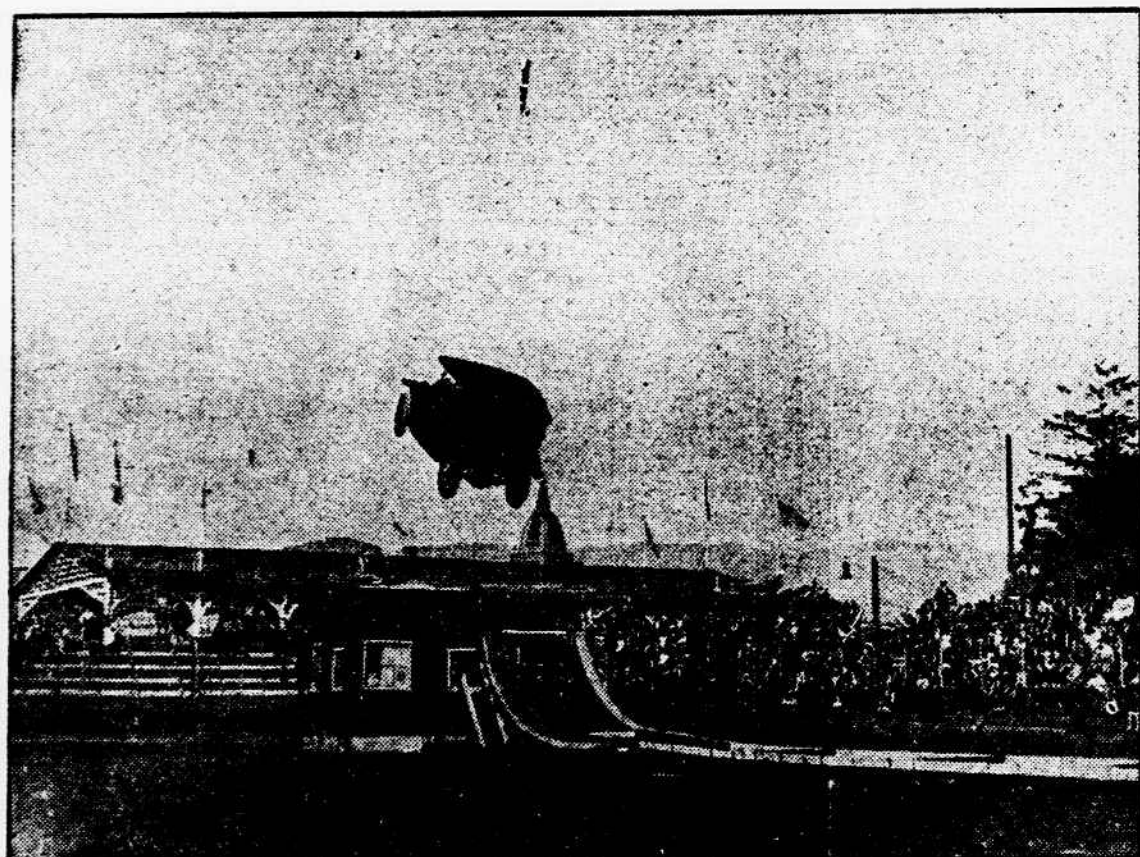

Bust of Lord Bryce, former ambassador from England to the United States, presented to the people of this country yesterday by Sir Charles Wakefield, former Lord Mayor of London, who represented the Sulgrave Institution. The unveiling took place in the Capitol.

Scene at the War Department yesterday when Col. John Philip Hill, member of Congress from Maryland, was presented with the distinguished service medal by Secretary of War Weeks. Mrs. Hill and children and Gen. Pershing attended the ceremony.

Miss Sarah Orr, secretary to the first woman senator, Mrs. W. H. Felton of Cartersville, Ga. Senator Felton has not come to Washington, but her office is in charge of Miss Orr.

The newest thriller. Touring car leaps over a fifteen-foot house. The stunt took place in a park at Oakland, Cal., where the small touring car was sent up an incline and jumped the house by a good ten feet.

Lieut. L. H. Sanderson of the marines, who was crowned speed king in the seaplane race at Detroit. He attained a speed of 125 1/2 miles an hour in a Curtiss 18-T triplane.

John Eissler, skilled engraver of the bureau of engraving and printing, who made the portrait of Ruth-erford Hayes which adorns the new 11-cent stamp. He is engraving a new portrait of President Harding.

Gen. von Hindenburg turns cleric for a day. He donned this garb during the annual meeting of the Patriots of the Berlin Cathedral.

Two leaders of the Turkish nationalist army sketched from life by a German artist. Mustafa Kemal Pasha is leader of the Turkish forces in Asia Minor and Ismet Pasha is his chief of staff.

Edna Brush Perkins, Cleveland society woman, crosses the great Mojave desert of southern California, on foot. The desert is the lowest and hottest, 280 feet below sea level.

California duck season opens, and this fair hunter, Miss Myrtle Miller of Los Angeles, bags a silverhead in the rice field preserves of the Delavan Duck Club at Delavan, Calif.

Left to right: Prof. M. M. Tulaikov, president of the Russian State Institution of Experimental Agronomy; D. N. Borodin, United States representative of the organization in New York, and Secretary of Agriculture Wallace. The visitors in Washington will make a study of dry farming in the west.